GENERAL INFORMATION

This report summarizes the results of the CMR investigation of the associations to which the Johns-Manville Corporation, its subsidiaries, and its personnel belong. CMR estimates that the investigation covered 95% of the company's association memberships in the United States and Canada.

The main body of the report is a list which sets forth this information about each of the approximately 300 associations studied:

1) The names of all J-M personnel who are members of the association in question. (In all, about 800 J-M personnel were found to be members of the associations studied.)

2) The designated abbreviation of the association.

3) The page number of the entry (if any) on the association in the Gale Publishing 1973

ENCYCLOPEDIA OF ASSOCIATIONS. This publication contains entries on about 200 of the associations studied. Each entry describes the purpose, membership, publications, committees, studies, and libraries of the association with which it deals.

This information is useful for a variety of purposes. It can help, for example, to:

1) obtain information about the library contents of, and studies conducted by, an association

2) determine the anti-trust implications of membership in a certain association.

3) determine the extent of the duplication of J-M association memberships.

4) determine whether, and when, J-M or one of its subsidiaries may need to join some new association.

This list comprises pages 1 through 30 (including pages 4a and 15a) of this report. Pages 31 and 32 contain a separate cross-reference list which gives the major association chapters and committees, referring each of them to its parent association. This makes an efficient search for associations possible.

A MORE DETAILED EXPLANATION - HOW THE INFORMATION OF THIS REPORT WAS GATHERED

The associations which CMR studied were business, trade, scientific, professional, management, technological, and hobby societies and organizations. (Hobby associations were included because they may be of interest to J-M's business: [redacted] outdoor recreation, for example, are related to J-M's operations at Elk Horn.)

The primary information about J-M's association memberships was gathered by tabulating the responses to questionnaires sent to Division Managers and GHQ personnel by W. F. Goodwin of the Public Relations Department, who wished to obtain general background information, and by R. R. Heath, Jr., of the Legal Department, who was interested in anti-trust matters.

Sometimes there were gaps in questionnaire responses. In some questionnaires, for example, coverage of the EDP Departments and Licensing Departments was missing, the declarations of association memberships in terms of Department business were inadequate, inverted association names were used, or an association was referred to by its initials (rather than by its full name). In each case of difficulty, CMR obtained the needed information by means of a telephone call to the person who had filled out the questionnaire, or by means of a specific request to the Department concerned. This was a very time-consuming, but necessary task.

The data gleaned from the questionnaire responses and from the ENCYCLOPEDIA OF ASSOCIATIONS were organized into a card file. Each card of this file covers one association and contains precisely the information given for each association in this report. CMR will periodically update the file, and thus keep track of any changes in J-M's association memberships. The file was used to draw up this report.
